HOLIDAY SEASON SALE

Bought your pillows & comforters elsewhere? Guaranteed you overpaid!!!

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

No Deer Must Ever Set Hoof In This Sacred Part Of East Hampton

By Dan Rattiner

The deer hunting season started last week on the East End. And this means that all the protesters are out, determined to let the deer know what awaits them so they can head to wherever they go in the woods to be undercover. The protesters were in the Calverton section of Riverhead last week for example, banging pots and blowing whistles, walking shoulder to shoulder through the heavy brush adjacent to the former Grumman Aircraft Site. Some of them carried signs reading STOP THE HUNT, END THE KILLING NOW and KILLING DEER IS NOT A RECREATIONAL SPORT. Others repeated the chant "Stop the Hunt, Stop the Hunt" while marching in lockstep.

The Grumman site is surrounded by a chain link fence with a metal gate across the entrance. At one point, a few of the protesters distracted a guard long enough for about forty protesters to storm through. The police were called. The protesters only left when threatened with being carted off.

"I fight for freedom and I am an animal liberator," one of the protesters, Nicole Mora, 24, of Oyster Bay, told a Newsday reporter.

The hunters, meanwhile...hunted. Although not with guns. They used bows and arrows, which was all the Town Permit allowed them. It is a restricted season. And given the very limited number of permits issued, the herd of about 1,000 deer in that area will probably be thinned by only

I think a compromise is in order between those who want to thin the herd by hunting some of them down and those who want to save the deer by allowing them to run wild and, sometimes, putting food out for them. There ought to be a certain area where it is legal to hunt the deer.

And there ought to be a certain area where the deer are protected.

The area where the hunt should be allowed, in my opinion, is up in the Springs, in an area bounded by Three Mile Harbor, Abraham's Path, Copeces Lane and Springs-Fireplace Road. Throughout the rest of eastern Long Island, the deer should be free to roam. (With the antelope and the buffalo, if need be, as the song goes.) It is a very serious responsibility being the editor of a newspaper, and having to make these kinds of judgements. So I have given this a great deal of thought.

As a matter of fact, I know the area where we should have the hunt very well. For the last twenty years, I have been spending almost fifteen hours every day in this area. My house is here.

notice... Just be sure, afterwards, that all the deer
carcasses are dragged away...

about 20%.

They say that there simply are too many deer on eastern Long Island for the amount of woods we have. They go in people's garbage. They run out into the street and get hit by cars. An East Hampton Village policeman told me the other day that if you go downtown about three in the morning almost any night this time of year you are likely to run into a deer clip clopping down the sidewalk on Main Street.

Can't help but wonder if Michael Douglas' pal, Marty Richards, will hold a summer version of Michael and Catherine Douglas's wedding. It was the wedding party of the century. But unlike the Douglas', he will not ask for cash! It seems new mom and dad requested money to be given to their new baby. No booties or bibs for this babe! The baby cleaned-up with enough cash to fund his college education. Wow!

Barbaralee Diamonstein was busy over the Thanksgiving holiday. She and hubby Carl took a break to fly to Milan from his very busy schedule for her photo exhibit of A Tale of Two Cities which she curated. The book is like our Barbaralee, beautiful, informative and in excellent taste.

Just when the temperatures drop here, the Palm Beach transplants head south. David and Julia Koch, James and Whitney Fairchild to name a few are long gone. They could have left prematurely, our weather here is still holding on to fall temperatures.

Neal Travis reported that these "dimpled chads" may effect three of our Hamptons' finest. Carl Spielvogel, Robin Duke and Peter Tufo's ambassadorial futures. These, our Democratic neighbors, don't have to worry in our eyes. Anytime that they have devoted to their jobs already is time well spent. We're behind you, our Hamptonsites.

Who says the Hamptons aren't on the cutting edge? The International Hampton Film Festival offered (and you should have gone!) the Jackson Pollock film of his life, Pollock. Pollock made its "official" debut at the Guggenheim Museum last Saturday evening to benefit its Film and Media Arts Program. Kim Cattrall (Sex in the City) and our buddy Mark Levinson, who sneak out here every summer and don't publicize it every five minutes like other bigwigs we know, are co-writing (you would never guess) a how-to sex guide book for couples. # Rectangle

Although it is true that so far the deer have not eaten everything and picked the landscape clean in this area, as they have in North Haven, for example, I have been seeing more of them than I have ever seen before. Once, when the dogs barked in the middle of the night about a month ago, I saw that a deer had set off the automatic outdoor floodlights attached to the house. There he was, standing in my driveway, a deer caught in my floodlights.

Another time, the dogs barked and though I didn't see the deer outside, the lights did go on and I could hear the little deer hooves running down the road. Also, in the morning, this entire bed of flowers, which we had just planted at a cost of hundreds and hundreds of dollars, was completely gone. It could make you sick.

I have chosen the boundaries for the deer hunt operation to be about a half mile in every direction around my house, not only because I want to be able to stop those deer from even seeing my remaining shrubbery, much less taking a run at it, not only because of the high regard I have for my neighbors, some of whom are wealthy or accomplished in their respective fields, or just plain thigh-slapping funny, but because this area all by itself is sacred ground, not only for the Native Americans who lived a few dozen miles from here, or so they say, but for the early settlers, who called this area bounded by Three Mile Harbor, Abraham's Path, Copeces Lane and Springs-Fireplace Road "the Historic Rectangle."

Lion Gardiner, the First English Settler of New York State, set foot on Long Island in 1639 just four miles to the east of "the Historic Rectangle." Teddy Roosevelt brought his Rough Riders to Montauk in 1898 just fourteen miles to the southeast of "the Historic Rectangle." In 1927, Charles Lindburgh flew The Spirit of St. Louis to Paris from an airfield just ninety miles west of "the Historic Rectangle." There are also some endangered species somewhere in here. Plants, I think.

Three Mile Harbor Road is a County Road, but it is clear to me the organizing of the deer hunt in "the Historic Rectangle" is an East Hampton Town matter, since all of this area is in East Hampton Town.

I propose a one day hunt for "the Historic Rectangle." There's no need to inconvenience me and my neighbors for more than that. Just give us two weeks notice. We'll all get out and stay with relatives while you do what you have to do.

Just be sure, afterwards, that all the deer carcasses are dragged away, and along the borders of "the Historic Rectangle" you sprinkle some sort of chemical that is harmless to humans and all other creatures, except for deer. And of course post some signs. Have the signs say HISTORIC RECTANGLE OFF LIMITS TO DEER. There should be the silhouette of a deer in a circle with a line through it.

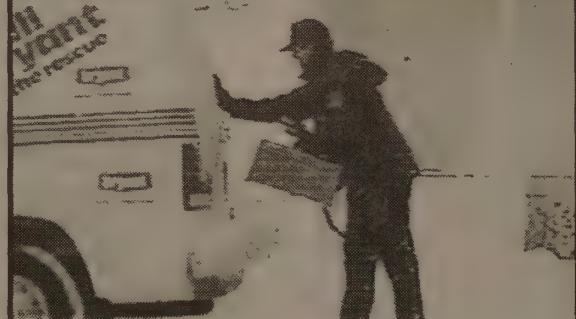

As for the rest of the East End, I think enough is enough as far as a deer hunt is concerned. We'd have this one area that is deer free. These cute creatures with those doe eyes and adorable eyelashes have to be allowed somewhere. I'd take up a protestor's sign for that.

Hunt the deer one place. Save the deer another. That's the ticket.

A Little Violence And Intimidation Can Cost A Candidate A Presidency

By Dan Rattiner

On election night, you may recall, Gore at one point called Bush to concede, then called back to withdraw his concession. According to witnesses, this is what they said to one another.

Bush: My brother has assured me he is bringing in the State of Florida.

Gore: Your brother is not the final word on who wins this election.

There has been a lot said by everybody between then and now, but I cannot help but notice there is a general theme about it all. The Democrats think there are large numbers of votes for Gore in Florida hidden from view and if they can find them Gore will be the President-elect. The Republicans are out to prevent the Democrats from looking for them.

This, on the face of it, is a very disturbing thing. One would think that since the two candidates got almost the same vote total, and since Gore offered to re-count the entire state, (Bush refused the offer) the proper procedure for a vote this close, any overlooked votes would be split down the middle. Bush's lead could widen just as easily as shrink.

For the most part, in the Florida courts, the Democrats won the right to look. And so they have. Election officials, with Democratic monitors on one side and Republican monitors on the other, have looked in Broward County and in Palm Beach County and have determined there are no large number of votes missing from there.

And then there is Dade County. The largest in the state. The County in which Miami is located.

I think the afternoon of Wednesday, November to those that received them, were recordings made as part of some automated phone system. The next morning, the people picked up signs protesting the vote count, and they went. Outside on the streets, people with bullhorns urged them on. And bulletins urging people to go were broadcast periodically on Radio Mambi, a Spanish language radio station in Miami. The bulletins said, among other things, that the re-count would be biased against Hispanics.

The vote canvassers, about twenty of them, arrived at the front of the building about 10 a.m. and had to be escorted through an angry crowd. Then the Republican and Democratic monitors began to arrive. The mood turned ugly. It was announced that the 22, is going to go down as the day that Bush succeeded in winning the election. Violence was involved. And as happens in history when one side gets violent and the other side backs away, history is made. This is not the way it is supposed to be in America.

On Tuesday evening, all around Miami, phones rang in the homes of Republican voters, urging them to go down to the Stephen C. Clark Government Center Wednesday morning to where the County Canvassing Board was about to begin recounting votes. Most of these phone calls, according re-count would begin behind closed doors, and the protestors rushed the doors and had to be turned away by police. Joe Geller, who is chairman of the Miami-Dade Democratic Party, arrived to supervise the counting and the crowd chased him down a side hall into the arms of the police. In front of the office of David Leahy, who is supervisor of the elections, the crowd punched and kicked Luis Rosero, a Democratic aide. He finally scrambled inside to safety.

From inside a meeting room, the Board of

Canvassers, who, the day before had voted unanimously to resume the re-count — the way had been cleared by the Florida Supreme Court — now could plainly hear a newscaster from Radio Mambi, Evilio Cepera, talking to the crowd over a bullhorn just outside.

"Denounce the re-count!" he was calling. "Stop the injustice!"

In this atmosphere, the Board of Canvassers changed their minds. There would be no re-count. They would all go home.

A great cheer rang out as this announcement was told to the crowd. And within ten minutes, the crowd had drifted away. A few reporters remained. One of them asked David Leahy, a nonpartisan member of the board and the supervisor of the election, if the protest had had an effect on their decision.

"That weighed heavy on our minds," he said. Then he said he would answer no further questions. And he would go home.

Thus ended the re-counting of the votes in Florida.

You may recall that there had earlier been a brief re-count of votes in Dade County. About 15% of the precincts were completed. Then the process was stopped to await the ruling by the State Supreme Court.

If the rest of Dade had followed in the same proportion as the fifteen percent, the winner of the Florida vote would have been Al Gore, not George Bush. That the counting did not continue after the way was cleared was the result of the rough tactics I've described above.

I might add that a spokesman for Mr. Bush did not denounce these tactics or even apologize for them. When asked for comment on what happened that night, James Baker brushed the question aside and basically changed the subject. He said it was a free country and the Democrats had sent Jesse Jackson down to Florida to chant and march.

These are the facts. Draw your own conclusions. •

Fat

Prosperity, Gluttony, Sport Utility Vehicles And A Thousand Ice Cream Sundaes

By Dan Rattiner

A study came out the other day that says fat is an alarming national problem. Ten years ago, only sixteen percent of the people in the country thought themselves fat. Today, the total is thirty-two percent. We have become a nation of fatties. And this in spite of a national attempt to slim everybody down.

Who can explain this?

At first, I thought it had to do with all the health food establishments that came into vogue during the seventies and eighties. You could drink celery tonic. Or seaweed soda. You could have pills with names like Tincture of Wort. Or you could eat raw Brussel sprouts in teriyaki flavored cement. The stuff was terrible. But people ate it for a minute or two, and then rushed to Kentucky Fried Chicken or Freddie's Pork Barbecue to wash the taste out of their mouths and flush the rest of it out of their systems.

There was also the psychological effect of having all this health awareness around. With lots and lots of OTHER people jogging and eating right, you didn't have to. You'd get thin anyway. Just from being around it all, some of it was bound this ten-year prosperity boom that has been going on since 1990. People can afford more. They eat more. They get fat. Fat is good. It is like all those pictures you see of kings. The fatter they are, the wealthier they are. No scrimping and saving for the King. Or anybody else with an abundance of money.

Now, I think the problem has to do with something that is an offshoot of the prosperity boom, the overwhelming popularity of SUVs and Minivans.

In the Seventies and Eighties, the car of choice was whatever got the best gas mileage. There was the Geo Metro. There was the Toyota Corolla. If you were rich and didn't have to take gasoline in small sips, you still thought small. Think of the Jaguar XKE. Think of the Mercedes SL. People zipped around.

Then came the boom. And with it, the SUVs and Minivans.

Today, go to the parking lot in front of any Supermarket. They have names now such as to rub off.

Next, I thought, perhaps it all had to do with

Piggly Wiggly King Kullen. Huge palaces of food to feed the overstuffed masses. Out front, you will see them lined up – the Expeditions, the Wagoneers, the Navigators, the Caravans. Huge ocean liners they are, and if you are so inclined, you can stand down at the end of any row and see all these fat people going into the supermarkets empty handed, and then later, emerge licking the remains of the stickybuns they've eaten while waiting for checkout, pushing metal carts overflowing with shopping bags, either plastic or paper, and then hefting them into the waiting cargo bays of these blimps on wheels.

From the supermarkets, these SUVs and Minivans waddle to the Price Clubs and Sam's Clubs where once again they line themselves up and disgorge the fat people into these enormous warehouses. An hour later the fatties emerge with six gallon bottles of peanut butter, 144 rolls of toilet paper, seventeen pound containers of salsa and huge oil barrels filled with Heinz Catsup, not in bags this time, but piled on forklifts.

Recently, the manufacturers of some of these SUV, and minivans have put huge new engines into their hippopotamuses, so that these fat people, having loaded their vehicles up with all this stuff, can get them home safely without tipping over. Finally, we will have put an end to all those head on collisions where a loaded

SUV with a small six cylinder engine tries to pass somebody on a curve. You've been reading about these accidents in the papers I'm sure, with all the scavengers running out to fight over pork loins, Mallomars, Buffalo Wings, bags of potato chips and baked beans.

Where will it all end? Well, in the Metropolitan Museum the other day, I saw an exhibit of native carvings of idealized women of the period. These women, surely great beauties, were 200 pound fatsos laden with bracelets and necklaces, rings and hair combs, and they had big, happy smiles on their faces. They were all stuffing their mouths with Ring Dings.

Maybe it doesn't have to end.

Is It Possible That The Giant Sixteen Inch Guns At Montauk Were Never Fired?

By Dan Rattiner

During World War II, as you may know, an army base was built in the woods on top of the cliff just to the west of the Montauk Lighthouse. Huge sixteen inch guns were installed into concrete bunkers at the top of the cliffs, and they pointed out to sea to be used in the event that the Nazis mounted an amphibious assault against this part of the United States.

I was not here during World War II in the 1940s, and the guns were never fired in anger, but I was here in the 1950s living with my parents in Montauk, and as a young boy remember seeing the dishes rattle in the cabinet in the kitchen as those guns, the largest in the world, were practice fired out to sea accompanied by a loud far-away boom. I have written in these pages about that.

Now, it turns out, I was wrong. And so I am writing here to correct this little footnote to history.

How I found out the truth was by joining a group of historians that met several weeks ago in Montauk with officials from the New York State Department of Parks to discuss this old army camp. Remnants of it still remain. There is interest in been out there in fifteen years. But I still found it a breathtaking experience. We looked at some of the buildings that still stand at the Army base itself, which were built disguised as parts of a fake fishing village. If German bombers ever came overhead, which they didn't, all they would have seen was what seemed to be a church, a village hall and some private homes. We also saw a radar tower that was built later, during the Korean War.

The concrete bunkers that make up the gun emplacements have been built with hundreds of tons of concrete and steel. Though the guns have been removed, the em-restoring parts of it as a Memorial to World War II and as a historic site. The property is owned by the State.

As part of the meeting, we took a tour of the site in a State Parks Department minivan. I hadn't placements with their reinforced concrete hoods are not going anywhere.

The guns themselves, from the photos of them, must have been twenty feet long. The phrase "16

"inches" refers to the diameter of the shell that fits into the gun barrel. So it would have been about as big around as the lid to a garbage can and maybe six feet long. They would have been too heavy for any man to lift. Instead, heavy chains attached to hooks embedded into the concrete bunkers would lift these shells high overhead and lower them into the breeches of the guns.

Dick White Jr. of the Montauk Historical Society, who was part of this meeting, told me he had been here in the late 1940s, and had seen, at that time, the giant guns cut up into pieces and being carted out of town on the backs of Army trucks.

"So you couldn't have heard them fired in the 1950's," he said.

"Then what DID I hear?" I asked.

"All through the 1950s," Dick said, "military units from up the island came out to Montauk to conduct maneuvers at the abandoned army camp. I remember seeing ten and twelve inch guns being hauled out on the backs of trucks. There were also personnel carriers. They would make a whole convoy through town and stay three or four days. They'd set up the guns at the top of the cliff. And they'd fire them at drones being towed by airplanes that came from the air base in Westhampton Beach. That's what you heard."

Dick said that he believed the World War II guns were fired, but only once. He hadn't heard them himself. But he said Mary Smith, who is still around today in Montauk, says that the guns were fired as an exercise in the middle of the war, but the sound was so loud that it broke windows in town six miles away. So they were never fired again.

"On the other hand," Dick said, "there are people in Montauk who were there at the time – and Mary was there at the time – who say nothing like that ever happened. The guns, simply were never fired. They'd have heard the sound. They hadn't."

"Maybe those people were down in the basement," I said, trying to be funny.

"I've heard that story too, that the guns were fired but just that one time," said Peter Gemellaro of the New York State Parks Commission.

"They HAD to have been fired," I said. There were five of us, standing around, looking at the bunkers, all men. "We're guys, aren't we? These were the biggest guns in America? We fired 'em."

Everyone nodded in silent agreement. Thus is the stuff of history made.

CIA Based Its Version Of The Flight 800 Crash On One Eyewitness

By Jerry Cimisi

What if the government initiated a major investigation concerning an incident that killed 230 people. And what if, out of hundreds of witnesses to various aspects of this incident the government based its explanation of the physical progress of events on the testimony of just one eyewitness.

And that eyewitness says the government skewered his testimony.

Like a lot of people on the night of July 17, 1996, Mike Wire, an engineer working on Beach Lane Bridge in Westhampton, saw a light flash up into the sky and explode – an explosion that proved to be TWA Flight 800, on which 230 died. But, unlike the other eyewitnesses, it seems that the Central Intelligence Agency, when it produced its “cartoon” of the Flight 800 explosion, relied almost exclusively on Wire’s testimony. This fact came out in an 85 page transcript of a meeting between the CIA and the National Transportation Safety Board in 1999.

But Wire, in a phone interview early this past summer, says the CIA extrapolated his statement in an incorrect manner.

here I would have expected them to have better fireworks.”

Over the house nearest the parking lot, the light briefly disappeared; then Wire saw an explosion, which became an orange fireball.

“It was a tube of flames that went straight down to the water,” Wire said in the phone interview.

“The fireball descended,” Wire’s FBI testimony reads, “at approximately a thirty degree angle and left a fire trail burning behind it.”

Yet when the CIA released its animation (the CIA “cartoon”) in November, 1997, they showed Wire’s perspective from Beach Lane Bridge and they showed Flight 800 exploding over the third house from the parking lot.

The NTSB has come to the conclusion that the rising streak of light which many eyewitnesses saw

Wire, Eyewitness 571 in FBI files, said he saw a zigzag white light rise up from behind the fourth house west of the beach parking lot in a south-westerly direction. The streak of light continued to climb in a zigzag manner. Wire’s impression was that he was witnessing fireworks. He added (in the phone interview), “With all the millionaires was actually Flight 800 after it had first exploded; the plane rose after losing its nose then exploded again, after which it descended as the plane broke apart.

It is the contention of many critics of the government's version of Flight 800 events that the CIA, contrary to what Wire said he saw, moved the explosion of Flight 800 from over the first house from the parking lot to the third house – in other words, farther east – to bolster the argument that the plane climbed after it erupted. (As the plane was miles from the shore, a slight change of close up perspective would translate into an appreciable distance in regards to the actual position of the plane.) But Wire saw the streak of light still climbing past the second house; as mentioned, he witnessed the explosion when the streak was over the first house from the parking lot.

In his testimony, Wire said he heard the sound of four explosions, the first after the plane had descended out of his sight, behind the house. The FBI report reads, "The concussion from the explosion shook the bridge Wire was standing on. Approximately eight to nine seconds after hearing the first explosion, Wire heard a second and third explosion. The third explosion occurred immediately following the second explosion or what appeared to be almost the same time. Approximately one second after the third explosion, Wire heard a fourth and final explosion." (In the FBI report Wire's name is blacked out for privacy concerns, as are the names of all eyewitnesses in the reports the Bureau released earlier this year.)

In the phone interview Wire said that the first explosion was the loudest, followed quickly by two others, "boom, boom, then a space, then the last explosion."

In a presentation to the Granada Forum in California this past September, journalist James Sanders, author of two books on Flight 800, discussed Wire's testimony, the CIA version, along with the issue of sound.

Sanders related that the CIA decided that no missile warhead, either domestic or foreign, could produce a sound that could be heard for eight to ten miles. This was stated in the transcript by a CIA analyst in the CIA-NTSB meeting. But NASA did its own sound propagation study and reached the conclusion that twenty pounds of TNT or similar explosives could indeed produce a sound that could be heard at least eight miles away.

"Twenty pounds of TNT is equivalent to a modest sized missile," said Sanders.

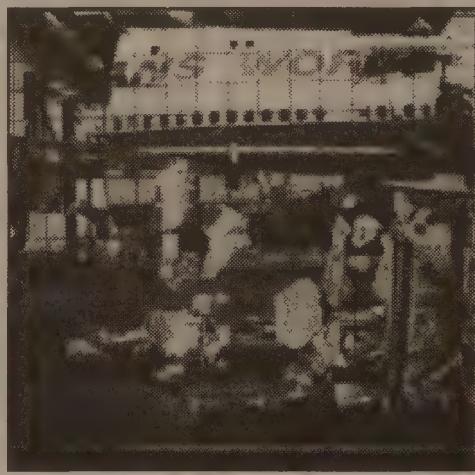

James Sanders, of course, gained fame or infamy, depending on one's view, when he and his wife Liz were convicted by the government for receiving small samples of residue from the seats of Flight 800 under reconstruction in Calverton. The samples had been tendered by a legitimate party to the investigation, TWA Captain Terrell Stacey, but Mr. and Mrs. Sanders were convicted under the charge of conspiring to remove evidence of an aircraft disaster. Sanders had the samples tested by an independent lab, which found the chemicals of the residue consistent with the composition of missile fuel exhaust.)

In the phone interview, Wire said that when he first detailed to the FBI what he had seen, he had the impression "they were feeling me out. When they repeated what I had said back to me they changed some of the facts around to see if I would repeat it differently."

He added, "They said I said the explosion occurred a half mile away. It was much farther than that. There were a lot of seconds before I felt the shock wave."

If, according to the transcript of the NTSB-CIA meeting, the agency modelled its animation on Wire's testimony, it never talked to Wire directly. Nor did the FBI, after its initial interview. None of the investigating agencies took Wire to the scene and had him repeat what he had witnessed.

Linda Ellerbee, producer, writer, news anchor, news correspondent, public speaker, and certainly one of the most quoted women in America, has said "How is it that so often.. I get the feeling I've worked hard to learn something I already know, or knew, once."

Earlier this autumn, Ms. Ellerbee, as a breast cancer survivor, spoke at the "Women's Wellness Seminar" held at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center. As one who has confronted and bested this terrible disease, Linda has been a prolific writer and speaker on the art of survival and the comic relief required to Move On, the title of one of her two best selling books.

Linda's first bestseller, the acclaimed And So It Goes, that spent 18 weeks on The New York Times bestseller list, is considered a true insider's look at life behind the camera, in the Television news business, and is used as a text book on college campuses across America. She is open about the frustration she felt early on, when she knew that while she was the "real deal," able to write, and present the news with skill, often the women correspondents were chosen for "a look" or "an appeal."

The author of the Get Real series of books about the adventures of a young woman reporter, Casey Smith, Linda is widely regarded as the most likely model for the Murphy Brown character immortalized by Candice Bergen. Linda faced her alcoholism much like the Murphy Brown character and grew to another level.

"I said what the hell, if Murphy can, I can," Linda remarked with her brash, blunt, outspokenness, and raw sense of humor.

She appeared in the Vagina Monologues, and was a woman "Writing Down the River" on PBS. She is famous for her irreverent look at the state of the universe.

"If men can run the world, why can't they stop wearing neckties? How intelligent is it to start the day by tying a little noose around your neck?"

Today Linda is best known for Nick News. She writes, produces and appears in each edition of this made for children and adults news series, covering with intelligence and taste difficult subjects like The Balkans, The Clinton Crisis, The Fight to Fit in, Kids and Guns. Teachers across the country use these educational programs as key elements of their curriculum. Parents turn to them seeking a platform from which to approach difficult subjects. In tackling these issues of the day, Linda believes that over simplifying, or talking down to kids is a mistake.

told Newsweek that the agency had for the most part based its version on the images of Flight 800 from spy satellites. But in the CIA-NTSB meeting a CIA analyst said that they had no spy satellite images, only eyewitness reports.

Graeme Sephton, a member of Flight 800 Independent Researchers Organization (FIRO), made a Freedom of Information Act request to the Air Force Space Command, asking for satellite data related to Flight 800, as well as correspondence from the Space Command to any federal agency regarding Flight 800.

In an email, Sephton related his "request for actual satellite data was denied using the very routine FOIA National Security exemption."

For some time after Flight 800 went down, there had been a rumor that a spy satellite focused on Brookhaven National Laboratory on Long Island, almost directly north of the incident, recorded the

"The secret to Nick News is the accurate assumption that our viewers have as much common sense as we do. They're only younger, they're not dumber."

She has won every kind of award: Emmy, Peabody, CableACE, Columbia duPont Awards. Her Lucky Duck Production company has won numerous Television Critics Association awards for Outstanding Children's Programming, Parent's Choice awards, and NEA awards. The list goes on and on.

Linda also writes a syndicated column, and is a highly sought after keynote speaker.

As an audio engineer at NBC throughout the late 60s, 70s and early 80s, I remember Linda Ellerbee as a smart, bold Texan, with high energy, and the ability to cover any story with intelligence and a worldly insight. Incidentally, she was as well liked and as comfortable with the technicians as with the high profile talent and producers. There weren't many highly respected women in the industry at the time, but Linda Ellerbee and Barbara Walters were two that I had the privilege of knowing. When ever I was feeling discouraged by a particularly difficult experience, coming into the studio to, yet again, find the cables cut before my next show, feeling alone and expected to achieve well beyond my male counterparts just to keep even, I often was buoyed by noticing that Barbara and Linda met the challenges while reporting the news on camera live before the world. I marveled at their strength and focus. Of course, within that small pool of "first women" none of us had first marriages that survived, the "you can have it all" myth eluded us, and few of us ever openly showed any need to lean on each other. Some of us didn't survive at all. Jessica Savitch comes to mind. I don't think any one of us really knew Jessica, but we all recognized that she was in troubled waters. Sometimes Jessica and I would just look at each other in the hall before the evening news update, each acknowledging our unique sense of isolation with a nod. I sure wish we weren't so good at protecting ourselves and were better at reaching out.

Linda has raced through life, overcoming the obstacles, seizing the opportunities, and living it to its fullest, and the best is surely yet to come. •

James Sanders said, "When my wife and I met with Mike Wire and his wife in Westhampton and we stood on the bridge where he had stood when he had seen the missile, he remarked how much easier it was to describe events when you were on the spot."

In the phone interview earlier this summer, Wire said, "It looked like a missile to me." At the time he thought he might have been witnessing a mid-air collision between two National Air Guard aircraft, out of Gabreski Airport in Westhampton.

Wire's FBI report ends with the fact that "soon after the explosion" he witnessed "a National Air Guard helicopter fly over the bridge."

In December, 1997, a few weeks after the CIA had released its animated version of Flight 800's explosion and alleged climb, Newsweek ran a number of panels showing the various stages of this animation along with the fact the CIA had explosion of the plane, but in 1998 a spokeswoman for the lab said that there was no information that this had been the case.

The Space Command also wrote to Sephton that it could not grant Sephton's request for correspondence between itself and other federal agencies because there were none. All communications had been verbal.

Sephton related, "It is hard to conceive how precise data could be passed out from a military organization verbally - would it be repeated up through the ranks from the person extracting the data via the chain of command...? (Did the NTSB question get passed down to the data analyst in the same manner?) How would any organization be certain it had passed the right data? Was approval for releasing the data also done on the fly? It just doesn't have that ring of military precision in triplicate." •

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

OBSERVATIONS OF A NEW ISLANDER # 134 WARTS AND ALL

My Thanksgiving was wonderful and I hope yours was too. I really got in tune with all the things I am grateful for here on the Island, all the unsung everyday wonderful people.

I am grateful for Donna and Donna and all the people who work at our IGA. They are consistently pleasant to be around. Their warmth is genuine, not just a show for customers. I can always share a laugh and a smile.

I am grateful for Pat and Steve's Restaurant where the food is delicious and the waitresses are stunning beauties. I am grateful for their fantastic Reuben sandwich. I'm grateful for it about once a week.

I am grateful for Bliss' Department Store and Jack's Marina, where my kids can go in and charge something to the Bank of Mom. I am grateful that both the Bliss' and the Anglin's make such an effort to help you and order what you need if they don't have it.

I am grateful for my pal Patty McGayhey who emails me terrific jokes that make me laugh in the middle of the night when I commonly find myself at the keyboard because I was too worried about something or other to sleep.

I am grateful that my children can go anywhere in safety, and as long as they don't get on a boat, I know where they are.

I am grateful for a school that helps my autistic son by giving him the wonderful special teacher, Debbie Gibbs Brewer, and his speech therapist, MaryJo Ridgeway. He didn't speak till he was five, he was in diapers and bottle fed till he was six. He's thriving now. Except for his fixations and social awkwardness, you'd hardly notice him as different. He'll probably never drive or manage a checkbook or live independently. It breaks my heart to think of all the things he probably won't do. I am grateful that he has been taught to read exceptionally well. He'll need to read so that books can take him all the places I can't.

I am grateful for Dawn the Hottie at Dandy's who tells me I'm brilliant. And for another $2.50 a week, she'll throw in beautiful too.

I am grateful for Reverend Crowson of St Mary's Episcopal Church and Pat Shillingburg and their phenomenal efforts to create affordable housing here. St. Mary's helps with food, clothing and shelter for anyone in need.

I am grateful for Mark Kanarvogel. I don't know him personally other than to say hello. But he is omnipresent in the community at every function that calls for volunteers and I admire him for it.

I am grateful for helpful police and a dedicated fire department.

I am grateful for the Shelter Island Lion's Club. I always thought those animal clubs, the Elks, the Moose, the Masons, et. al., were just places for men to meet and drink. Our Lion's Club gives out turkeys, food, IGA gift certificates, and other real assists for those who could use a hand. And their discretion is impeccable. If I didn't personally know who they help, I'd never hear it around town.

And not to be outdone, the Caring Council at Out Lady of the Isle R.C. Church has helped more people than can be counted. This is a marvellous Catholic Church that recycles its parishioner's generosity back into the community. Mother said this was not your typical RC Church and she was right; well, of course, she's Mom.

I am grateful for Chris the Crossing Guard. In the worst weather, she's out there slowing down 18 wheelers and 18 wheeler wannabes with her bare hands. She never fails to smile and wave hello as I go by, never.

I am grateful for Gerry Siller, our Town Supervisor. He is a terrific guy who had all his hair and sanity before he took the job. He conducts business wherever he goes, whether he wants to or not, at the dumps, the Post Office, school grounds, everywhere. Everyone on the Island knows exactly how everything should be done and we all share this knowledge with Gerry, and boy isn't he grateful....

On the whole Island, I've only met one despicable person. A man I'll call Mr. Blank. This man has burned nearly every worker on this Island. He pays a deposit up front, they do the work, and he stiffens them for the balance. He also accepts money from people to do work and then never does the work. And he does it over and over. Occasionally people have sued for their money and won, but they can't collect since he usually works for cash and keeps his possessions in other people's names. The police say it takes four complaints for them to start an investigation for fraud. But no one has ever formally complained about this ongoing theft of service. It's amazing. I don't know how this man walks through town with his head up. They say you have to love the Island, warts and all. I guess he's our resident wart.

But I can be grateful for him too I suppose. His presence makes me fully realize all the everyday heroes who live here. It's still a great place to live, wart and all.

elaine k.g. benson, her daughter's column

I hope you all had a wonderful Thanksgiving! It's a great time for family and feasting. I have tried to ignore or deny the fact that the holiday celebrates the taking of a land from its indigenous population. I spent the holiday with a Swedish girlfriend, her Dutch husband, their British son in law, a Spanish born painter, and a few other non-Americans. I don't think we need to celebrate taking the land from our native Americans. We can focus on the thanks and on the giving. It would be great if we could redefine the meaning of this holiday to honor our native Americans.

This time of year many not for profit organizations send out their year-end fundraising letters. I went to the post office after my short trip to Las Vegas and was amazed by the collection of letters asking for money. It was overwhelming. I have letters from the Bridgehampton Lions Club and the Bridgehampton Community House. There's a card from "Little Shelter" in Huntington. East End Hospice in Westhampton Beach serves the entire East End. They ask for tax deductible contributions and matching company contributions. The Southampton Little League, March of Dimes, the Bill T. Jones/Arnie Zane Dance Company, and Literacy Volunteers of Suffolk County also had year end appeal letters in the same mail delivery. Last week included the Red Cross. I've been a part of the year end appeal for Southampton Hospital. I also work with a number of local charities. We all need to raise money. The holidays mark a time of generosity and the spirit of giving. It is impossible to give to everyone and everything. I'm trying to determine my priorities and figure out how I can give where it matters the most. Usually, I'm in Mexico for Christmas. I've taken in children's clothing for years. I play Santa Claus. I try to have something for everybody. I make cookies and rumballs. I usually cook a smoked turkey and make hot mulled cider. I was always the traditionalist in my family. They all laughed at my domestic tendencies. My mother and I had fun decorating but for almost twenty years I stayed in Mexico for the holidays and created a feeling of Christmas for my community of friends. My husband was a bit of a bah humbug type. He still managed to join me in singing Christmas carols and holiday cheer.

I choose to stay in this cold snowy part of the world this Christmas. At Dan's Papers we pick a name out of a hat and give presents to the person we pick. Invitations to holiday parties are arriving. The Bridgehampton Child Care and Rec. Center will hold a community party. The Southampton Cultural Center has a holiday program. There will be a tree lighting ceremony at the Maidstone Arms this Friday. The streets are decorated and I'm reminded of trips to Manhattan to see the Christmas decorations when I was a small child. My mom loved walking up Fifth Ave. I remember FAO Swartz, a winter wonderland of toys.

Saint Ann's Church in Bridgehampton always has a party and a toy drive. One of my friends from Saint Ann's looks for a family in need and gives them Christmas dinner. Anyone holding a coupon for a free turkey can give it to the food pantry at the Church. It will be put to good use.

2001 is right around the corner. Will this be the year of the real space odyssey? We've made it through Orwell's 1984. We're entering a new age. I'm excited! It's a fascinating time we live in.

It's time to take out your checkbook and give to your favorite charities. I've just taken out my sewing machine, as well. I love the idea of making as many of my gifts as possible. My favorite Christmas cards come from artists and are homemade. My mother kept the best cards that came in through the years. Some are worth framing. We live in such a wonderful place. It's great to stay here for a change.

I won't miss my annual migration to Mexico. I'm like a gray whale or a snowbird. I have to go south. A friend called to say there is a hummingbird outside his window in Watermill. He is worried for it. It's time to find a warmer environment. He doesn't have a greenhouse and wants it to make it through the winter. He's been on the phone seeking information. Anyone with any ideas should get in touch. We have to help our little feathered friends.

-Kimberly Goff

ARGUING ABOUT THE ELECTION AT THANKSGIVING DINNER

By Janet Berg

Thanksgiving has always been my favorite holiday, symbolizing joy and peace, loving families, and being thankful for what we have; until this year. Instead, it has turned our family into the Hatfields and the McCoys, and a good old-fashioned food fight would have been more civilized.

I smelled trouble when I saw the renderings of an elephant laughing in the face of a donkey at the top of a beautifully planned gourmet menu of appetizers such as: hearts of celery stuffed with gouda and sun-dried tomatoes corn bisque with red bell pepper and rosemary soup; side dishes such as baked spiced butternut squash drizzled with pure maple syrup; en salada miste verde, and of course, the main course: crispy roast apple-jack tarragon turkey with mushroom bacon leek stuffing.

The menu was perfect, as was the flower arrangement, the candles, and the huge formal dining room table set for sixteen – ten staunch Republicans, five resilient Democrats and one twenty-one year old member of the Green Party. I'm not sure if I counted right, but, oh, what the heck.

As soon as we sat down to talk turkey, I mean politics, I had wished there were no utensils within anyone's reach. There was a clash of high-strung personalities, the melding of different generations, and just plain "attitude" mixing in the air with the aromas.

Some of the diners included: the "about-to-retire-postal-worker-gourmet-chef," his "I'll-get-that," "I'm-coming," "Would-you-like-that-reheated?"-wife; their "oldest son, the-soon-to-be-Washington D.C. attorney," their other son, the "liberal-New-York-Times-journalist," "the-sweet-devil-in-disguise-recent-college-grad," "what-am-I-gonna-do-now?"-daughter, the "out-spoken, 'you-don't-know-what-poor-is'-grandmother," their adopted, no-one-knows-the-age-of-golden retriever, Dakota, and their mysterious—"No, we-don't-have-a-cat" cat.

Other family members invited were: the—"Women-don't-know-anything-and-should-stay-out-of-politics"- grandfather; the passive, "Would-you-like-another piece of apple pie?" grandmother, the "I-refuse-to-grow-up-Aunt Nut," her, "I'm-proud-to-say-the-last-time-I-voted-was-in-1976 for Jimmy Carter", leftover hippie husband," their "environmentalist-always-watching-the-weather-channel-surfer-son," and the "I'm-just-a-vegetarian"

ian,"I-don't-know-anything-leave-me-alone' daughter."

Then there's the "rich bastard, cigar-smokin' Uncle from the gold coast," his, "Do you think I-should-go-to-Florida-to-help-the-Republican-party(?)"-wife, their "confused, Bryn Mawr 'should-

I-rebel?'"- teenage daughter," and her younger, "troublemaking-'I-scored-the winning-goal,'-brother."

And last, but not least, the -"Why-is-the-sky-blue?"-great-grandson. Oh yeah, and the only physician who still associates with the family, the "bi-partisan-diplomatic, congenial, 'So, what-is-your-cholesterol?'" Dr. Greg."

Before I describe the dinner scene, I have to share some of the goings-on in the living room, where we indulged in alcohol and appetizers. There was also a sole outsider(poor fellow), who happens to be the son of a senator (no lie) whom the "youngest troublemaker" immediately introduced to the "outspoken grandmother" for his own amusement, before he slipped away.

"Outspoken grandmother's" first words to him were, "I always said, "You can't trust any politicians they're all . . . blah blah blah..."

But the senator's son just nodded and cordially smiled, sipping his Pinot Grigio, and graciously declining when asked by the host to stay for the 'entire' dinner.

Meanwhile, "Aunt Nut" and the "Vegetarian" planned a prank on the gourmet chef. They submerged under the table, where they poured two cans of cold, off-brand creamed style corn they brought from home, into an empty bowl; garnished it with the parsley from a plastic bag they also brought with them and resurfaced to the table unnoticed.

Some people actually liked it, and took a couple of helpings, including, Dr. Greg. This cracked up the pranksters, who tried to keep a straight face as they joined the others and passed the bowls of food down the long, huge table.

The levity was contagious, but the merriment soon turned as dark as the gravy was thick, when the election was brought up.

Little Alex asked, "What's a gravy boat?"

Poor child, ignored once again.

And because no one ever answers him, he thinks Florida made history because some guy named Chad is pregnant.

The chitchat got real ugly, over the pimpled and the absentee ballots; some even suggested the ballots should have been printed like Bingo cards; "They never would have counted it wrong then."

Everyone had different agendas. Some people got too stressed-out and also ended up under the table, as they didn't know where else to go. I think "the surfer" and "the leftover hippie" went

Thanksgiving

under the table with the wrong 'glad bag,' and tried to light up the parsley.

At some point during the evening, almost everyone there needed to go "under the table" for their own personal reason. For some, it was simple, just basic comic relief of tying people's shoes together. It was a different world under there, non-committal and apathetic.

You could hear the bowls clattering above, the clanking of the forks and spoons, all the common noises of the dinner table, in between the outbursts of Republicans versus Democrats and their issues on education, health plans, foreign policy . . .

Every once in awhile, the chef's wife would try to play mediator. The mediator would say, "Okay, let's change the subject, let's not talk about politics." But, somehow it would always get back to it.

Deep secrets came out during heated arguments. Someone revealed that the chef keeps guns in the basement. Someone else thought it was funny to come up from the basement wearing one of his old army helmets.

"I suppose you support the NRA," the vegetarian cried out, with only one brussel sprout on her plate. Then there was fighting over animal rights. Suddenly the poor dead bird on the central platter looked . . . unappetizing.

The outspoken grandmother talked about the old days in Brooklyn. "We were sooo poor," she said. "There were stables across the street from where we lived, and whenever a horse died, they would just put it out by the curb until someone would come and take it away. I remember sitting on a dead horse when I was six years old, eating my sandwich."

"I think I'm gonna be sick," the vegetarian blurted out.

I was convinced that our family was crazy. But what really topped it off, and what will stay in my mind forever, is when the "rich bastard" put down his goblet of red wine and announced very quietly, "It's getting hot in here." That's when his "rebellious teenage daughter" started hitting him hard on the back and screaming, "Oh my God," you're on fire." He had unknowingly leaned back into a candle and lit his new Ralph Lauren sweater aflame.

Everyone got quiet when they realized the seriousness of a person lit on fire. But, that only lasted about two minutes. Then it got loud once again.

"More apple pie?" the grandmother asked.

During dessert, the rich bastard's wife, who says she is highly allergic to everything, stepped outside in her fur coat to have a smoke. "Do you have a cat?" she asked her sister in law, 'cause my ears feel funny and that only happens when there's a cat around."

The outspoken grandmother: "Did I ever tell you about the time my Uncle Tooty bit the ear off a dog?"

"Oh my god," the vegetarian cried. "Here we go again."

Like cats and dogs, the fighting continued, on and on and on, sort of like the election. Alka Seltzer tablets were soon passed around. And it was all Gore and Bush's fault.

Although, some didn't look at the Thanksgiving Dinner as ruined. Some thought, "This is a Thanksgiving Dinner we will never ever forget." •

Graduating With A Degree In Gingerbreadology

By Pamela Gibson

One of the most delightful afternoons can be spent at Gingerbread University located right on Sound Avenue in Baiting Hollow (Riverhead), in the heart of farming country. On arrival you are assigned your own personal Gingerbread Elf to guide you through choosing an undecorated house then through picking and applying your decorations. The Elves are available to provide expert design and execution tips, although you can just let your imagination go, and create any style or theme for your gingerbread house. This past Saturday, the University was filled with adults and children of all ages proving just how creative they can be. The results were stunning. In addition to the fully edible gingerbread house creation that you get to take home, you also receive a diploma in Gingerbreadology granted by Fred Terry, the owner and professor, of the university.

Fred Terry's family has been in the food business (farming and restaurants) on Long Island for more than 350 years. That's right, the Terry family, alongside the Rev. Young family, founded Southold in 1640. Fred Terry opened the Northside Lobster Roll Restaurant last year right next to the Gingerbread University and the food is as superb as the more than twenty-five-year-old Lobster Roll Restaurant in Amagansett, a very popular and acclaimed restaurant, also a Terry family enterprise. Locals call the southside restaurant 'Lunch' for the large sign on the roof. The menu at both restaurants is just full of delightful and delicious seafood, including the famously hearty Lobster roll. The clam chowder is wonderful.

The Gingerbread University shop is a child's delight, filled with sugars and spice and everything nice, and a playground for tots is located right outside. The University is open almost all year and very popular with local scout clubs, birthday boys and girls of all ages, corporate groups, and charitable organizations. You can entertain your group holding a decorating competition and have the top notch restaurant next door cater the event. They even prepare special food and cakes for birthdays and anniversaries. This past Saturday the event room was prepared for a birthday party and twenty-four children were each decorating their own small gingerbread house. Recently the marketing department of a large familiar bank on Long Island held a "Team Building" event challenging each team of five employees to develop a theme and build a gingerbread town. The Western and 101 Dalmatians Towns are on display at the University.

There are sample gingerbread houses on view representing the holidays of all religious denominations and all times of the year, Hanukkah, Valentines Day, Thanksgiving, Halloween, Easter and Passover, the possibilities are endless.

As if this weren't enough of a treat, there are several charming shops within the complex.

The intoxicating aroma of seasonal potpourri is the first thing to hit you when you walk into The Cottage sachets. There is unique and beautiful sleepwear ranging from the warm and cozy to the very sexy, tailored dresses to velvet party or loungewear, and lovely bed and bath linens and pillows. Savannah, another shop in the complex, is devoted to antiques, gifts, and collectibles with a decidedly Victorian theme. The perfect place to shop for ornaments, stocking stuffers, and charming house gifts. Next door is the Velvet to Denim children's apparel shop, a grandparents' bonanza. One-of-a-kind adorable outfits and accessories abound. Precious little dresses are intricately detailed in tulle, silk roses, ribbons, and lace. A Wine Shop and Realtor are also a part of this fun collection of shops.

There is something of interest for every member of your family here in the heart of both farming and wine country. For party reservations you can call The Gingerbread University at 631-727-7309, or just stop in Thursday through Saturday 11am to 6pm, Sunday from 12pm to 5pm. From the Hamptons just take Route 105 north until it ends at Sound Avenue, then go left (west) three miles to the Gingerbread University on your left.

Rose, a shop of women's apparel, accessories, holiday treasures, scented soap, and, of course, potpourri. I was delighted by the gift boxes of soap rose petals, and the

Shop 'til You Drop With Maria Tennariello

Now that the Thanksgiving holiday is behind us, we can really concentrate on Christmas and Hanukkah gift giving. Seems like just yesterday we were at the Hampton Classic! So, let's do some serious shopping!

Starting out on Railroad Avenue in Center Moriches,

I stopped in at The Garden

Spot Christmas Shop

because I heard so much about this store. I was amazed at the decorations and gift here. All the collectibles are 50% off including Boyds/Charming Tails, Frykman and Willraye. I found tons of Christmas lights, ornaments (about 34 theme trees), Lemax lighted village, tree tops and garlands, fabric Santas and angels, wire outdoor figures, candles and holders, table top decorations, holiday flags and plaques, ornaments, glass balls, live and artificial Christmas trees, wreaths and flowering holiday plants, unusual gifts for everyone, wind chimes, weather vanes, bird feeders, baths and food, and to top it off a visit with Santa for children and pets. Call for schedule for Santa and bring your own camera. Call 631-878-5662 for information.

On Jobs Lane in Southampton, at The Secret Closet you should really take advantage of this very special "Holiday Sale" that will run through December 24. It's no secret that The Secret Closet is offering 50% off all fall and winter merchandise including wool, mohair and silk skirts and sweaters, leather skirts, pants and jackets. These items are regularly $160 to $300 and the sale reflects $80 to $150. Call for information 287-1588.

In the Bridgehampton Commons at T.J. Maxx, you won't believe your eyes! For the holiday's T.J.'s is doing a whole new store set up, daily with merchandise deliveries through December 24 with more gifts than ever before. No kidding!

Looking for something really different for gift giving this season? How about a kayak! At East Coast Adventure Tour Co. on Noyac Road in Sag Harbor, they are offering a kayak accessory sale with 10% off and from $35 to $50 off on kayaks. Open year round, to cater all your paddling needs, call them at 725-4712 for information.

At Sue's Gifts Sag Harbor on Main Street, look for a unique and eclectic selection of unusual gifts. Things like gift baskets, personalized, garden, nautical, children's, beach, flags, pillows, afghans, garden furniture, children's furniture, candles, and more. You will love this shop, I do!

Stop in at Hedges on Main Street in Sag Harbor for some great tableware, gifts and antiques.

At Treasure Island in Wainscott Village Center on Montauk Highway in East Hampton, look for a 20% savings on icicle lights, net lights, wire sculptures, extension cords, gutter clips and more. You will find lots of trees, wreaths, lights, trim décor and a store fill to the rafters with the smells and flavors and the music that makes Christmas a joyous time of the year. There are dazzling gift-wraps, music boxes, vases and baskets, and more. And if that's not enough, look at their delightful arts and crafts department that offers creative figs and stocking stuffers for kids and adults.

Deck the Ashawagh Halls on Saturday, December 9 from 10 a.m. until 8 p.m. and Saturday December 10, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Ashawagh Hall is located on Springs/Fireplace Road in East Hampton and this very special fine art, craft and gift show should not be missed. There will be floral design, jewelry design, photography, stained glass artists, potters, basketmakers, silk-screen T-shirt design, furniture crafts, decoy carver, hand crafted soaps and beauty products, weavers, prints, hand-crafted "antiqued" signs with East End titles and names. All of the above are handcrafted on the South Fork. Call 324-9802 for information.

A little off the beaten path for me, but hard to resist, is the "Fourth Annual Garment Center Holiday Bargain Shopping Tour" at 1411 Broadway and W. 39th Street, at the Golda Meier Statue, New York City. You will literally enter an area that is normally off limits to the public, where bargain-shopping opportunities abound. The showrooms are in the heart of the garment center where only store buyers normally venture. In these very showrooms you will be offered fantastic bargains in most categories ranging from sweaters, slacks, blouses, coats, shawls, shoes and much more. Here's the best part; bargains are often offered at prices well below wholesale. Rain or shine, from November 29 through December 21, call for the complete schedule and information at 212-370-4214.

Hot off the press! Arline's Salon is hitting the road. Starting Sunday December 3, Arline's Salon at the Omni will be Arline's Salon in Motion. Arline's will be a mobile salon that will come to you with all the same great services you got and would expect from the best full service salons. Call her today for information and appointments at 283-7472 and 369-3434. And the best part, you will get the same great cup of coffee and a smile from Arline and her staff.

Q. I have a very busy holiday schedule and I really don't have the time to decorate my home for the holidays. Is there a service that does this for you? B.L. - Bridgehampton

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Holiday Shopping!

A. I have just the service for you. Call Landmark at 631-324-6434 to set up and take down your Christmas tree, decorating, gift-wrapping and assembling, handmade wreaths, centerpieces, lighting (indoors and outdoors), for Christmas or Hanukkah. Landmark also puts together quite a holiday package to help you enjoy the holidays. M.T.

Dan's Papers "They Made The Movie Here" Film Festival 2000

Featuring films that either takes place in the Hamptons or were filmed here.

Saturday, December 2nd - For Love Or Money

Michael J. Fox is the concierge of a fancy New York hotel with enough chutzpah, ambition and goodness to make a million. When it comes to love, see him storm Southampton beach society by helicopter.

Saturday, December 9th - Whispers In The Dark

Murders more than wicked! They are rife with psychopathia sexualis, bondage, sadism and explicit nudity and are all strung out with chills and thrills. The kinky doings include (would you believe?) nice Alan Alda and his extra nice town, Water Mill.

Saturday, December 16th - She-Devil

Meryl Streep is wonderfully wacky as a glamorous novelist who steals unliberated Roseanne Barr's sleaze-bag husband. Roseanne gets satanic revenge of the most evil and outrageous kind. Port Washington and all Jitney stops east will never be the same.

*Dan's PapersChristmas Guide 2000Holiday Treats At Tate's Bake Shop

Kathleen King is celebrating her first holiday season under her new business name, Tate's Bake Shop. These have been turbulent times for the Southampton native, but this season we all have something to celebrate as she is back at the helm of the business she made so successful. In the second issue of her Bake Shop News, Kathleen reminds us that "nothing is perfect; enjoy the moment in which you are living and slow down. Give thanks to life." Good advice anytime, but especially as we approach the holiday season when we are more likely to stress out than to relax. Just remember, Tate's famous and fabulous baked goods not only make terrific holiday gifts, but great personal indulgences, too!

Tate's is offering a variety of their baked goods as "Holiday Gift Packages for Shipping." The "Taste of the Season" package includes Chewy Coconut Macaroons, Traditional Gingerbread Cookies and a Nutty Pumpkin Bread. The "Nut Lovers" package consists of a choice between Tate's delicious Sour Cream Coffee Cake and their dense, flavorful Pecan Pie. Decisions, decisions! "Chocolate Lovers" will satisfy the most ardent chocolate fan: two bags of Tate's Chocolate Chip Cookies, made famous by Kathleen (the product upon which she launched her business, in case you've been out of the country for the last twenty years!) and two rich Fudge Brownies. All of these packages range in price from $20 and $25 and include shipping and handling.

Great gift ideas for those friends and relatives you won't be able to see in person for the holidays. If you haven't been in Tate's Bake Shop recently to share in the happiness of Kathleen's return, now is the time. Aside from those famous cookies, all of our old favorites are here: fruit pies, lemon squares, chocolate peanut butter squares, muffins, layer cakes, tea loaves (try the lemon!) and carrot cakes doesn't complete the list. In addition, you'll find some special holiday treats: assorted truffles, Yule logs, Christmas Stollen and assorted chocolates and candies. Also available are Tate's Cookie Platters: two pounds of assorted cookies, including Butterballs, Macaroons, Polish Tea and Gingerbread Cookies, Shortbread and Lemon Squares. The platters make lovely hostess gifts, priced at $25.

Still searching for the perfect gift for a friend who loves to bake? The original "Kathleen's Bake Shop Cookbook" is available at Tate's, with all of those authentic recipes, for only $12.95 plus tax. This is a true Hampton Classic!

The holidays should be a happy and joyous time of year, but all too often, we loose site of the joy and focus on the pressure. This year, remember to slow down and, when all else fails to soothe our souls, follow Kathleen's advice: "Eat Pie!"

-Susan Simm

"LOOKING OR NOT LOOKING" AT GAYLE WILLSON

The current show at Southampton's Gayle Willson Gallery is a sight for sore eyes—a most fitting description considering its theme, "Looking or Not Looking." While the textiles, ceramics and photographs by prominent British artists attract our other senses as well, particularly texture, it's the visual impact that's the star here.

Yet the question remains, what exactly is meant by "Looking Or Not Looking," an explanation that may tie the various works together in this stunning show curated by Carole Waller. Or stated another way, what central idea determines the connection between seemingly disparate pieces—on what concept can we "hang" a common thread? (Pardon the pun as it relates to the clothes.)

One idea concerning "Looking Or Not Looking" is suggested by textile designer Warren Griffiths when he offers a rationale for his unique criss-cross stitching, a technique that predates weaving. (His own influences come from Japanese fashion particularly popular during the 1980s.) Mr. Griffith's intricately-made material can be compared somewhat to "virtual reality," where viewers see a reproduction of actuality as they travel a maze-like, complicated course. (This critic is thinking of video games where participants are "put in the driver's seat" as a car maneuvers a street fraught with obstacles.)

Jackets by Kate Lewis signify another interpretation of "Looking or Not Looking" where merely looking at the garments garners surface meaning alone, while "seeing" goes beyond. The three pieces, arranged like an installation, represent three stages of a relationship as a woman (the artist herself) falls in love, separates and lives with the consequences. The colors, which evolve from grey to blue to brown, respectively, reflect the mood of each stage as each jacket's stitching also mirrors heart-felt sentiments.

Seeing rather than looking might also be applied to Carole Waller's outfits, where abstract designs, material and presentation become an extraordinary three-dimensional art work. Gary Wood's ceramics, especially his bowls, also require seeing rather than looking, as they evolve into crevices of a volcano (although their colors derive from Morocco, not a crater).

Finally, Maggie Lambert's photographs of refugees seeking asylum literally deal with seeing as color bands mask their eyes (and identity). They cannot observe us, and we can't perceive them: the refugees have become faceless and homeless as they were in their own countries.

"BOKUNEN NAKA" AT AVRAM GALLERY

The lush, colorful and intricate woodblock prints by Bokunen Naka now at Southampton College's Fine Arts Gallery is also a feast for the eye as is Gayle Willson's exhibit. Many stylistic derivations come into play in these very special pieces, including Cubism, Expressionism, Symbolism and perhaps even folk art.

There are other mixtures at work here: dense concentration of imagery as well as open space; animals and people; abstraction and figuration. Storytelling abounds, yet still lifes are also present.

We are reminded of works by local artists, too, like Amy Zerner and her mystical, magical Goddess designs.

Mr. Naka literally and figuratively encompasses the cosmos with his innovative imagination and arresting aesthetics.

The show at Southampton's Gayle Willson Gallery will be on view until Jan. 7; Mr. Naka's woodblock prints will be at Southampton College's Fine Arts Gallery until Dec. 8.

HONORING THE ARTIST: Wendy Prellwitz

It was the day after Thanksgiving and North Fork artist / Cambridge, Massachusetts architect, Wendy Prellwitz, had had a busy holiday: cooking for seventeen people at her Peconic home (even though she quickly made clear that everyone brought a dish). There were even six children in attendance to boot (who played chess at the other end of the table.)

The Thanksgiving dinner leaves us with one thought: Ms. Prellwitz is someone who has things pretty much under control. This perception rings true when we learn how she has managed to have a double career and raise a family, too.

First, there's Ms. Prellwitz' continuing commitment to art. "I come from a dear family tradition," she explains. "Both my great grandparents and grandparents were artists; I remember coming out to my grandparents' home (which was built in 1812) on the North Fork every summer of my life."

Ms. Prellwitz continues. "I went to the Rhode Island School of Design and got a degree in Fine Arts." That academic training and exposure to the North Fork surely must have inspired Ms. Prellwitz' penchant for landscape, particularly the vineyard that graces this week's cover.

But painting wasn't the only profession that Ms.

Prellwitz pursued. While at school, she also got a second degree in architecture. Which makes sense, considering that her father was an engineer and her grandfather a landscape architect. Even so, architecture wasn't a field that welcomed many women to its ranks.

"There were 100 men and fifteen females in my class," Ms. Prellwitz recalls without any sign of bitterness. Being a woman hasn't been a detriment for her, however. She has headed her own firm for nearly twenty years; her husband is a partner.

Even so, painting has always been an important part of Ms. Prellwitz' life. In the mid-1980's, she returned to it with a fervor, the enthusiasm building during the subsequent years. She attributes this to the strong bond she feels to the land.

"I feel a connection to particularly three places," Ms. Prellwitz comments. "Going to Maine, especially Monhegan Island, has been inspiring, considering that artists like Edward Hopper painted there." She is also quick to point out that she is attracted to the abstract qualities of the rock and water formations which she finds there.

Other places evoke different responses, but they also serve as intense connections for Ms. Prellwitz. "I received a fellowship to paint in Ireland," she reveals. "The coastline is stunning. And, of course, Long Island means so much to me. The light, the big, flat spaces where you can look out over the land, to think there's something beyond."

We take a glance at Ms. Prellwitz' vineyard again. Although she describes it somewhat differently, even its closed space diverts the viewer's attention—as we also look beyond the trees and ponder infinity.

"Long Island is literally in my bones," Ms. Prellwitz explains. "But it really doesn't matter where you are. It's your relationship to the paint, to the connection that you feel."

—Marion Wolberg Weiss

Ms. Prellwitz's work can be seen at Southold's Corey Creek Vineyards until December 15 and at Greenport's Yellow House Gallery on Dec. 2, 3, and 9.

The Hampton Theatre Company

There are community theaters and then there are community theaters that are truly special. The Hampton Theatre Company is one of these special phenomenons. Now in its sixteenth season and newly housed at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center, the recent play, A.R. Gurney's The Dining Room, was a good illustration of the Company's strengths.

The Company's new venue at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center is certainly a plus while its permanent place, Quogue's Village Hall, is being renovated. The Performing Arts Center is a real delight: comfortable seats, an intimate yet professional setting, a perfect place for a cultural center smack in the middle of a charming "village" atmosphere.

The real pleasure, of course, is the company itself. No matter where it may perform, it's a top-notch group, able to articulate both classic and contemporary works. This observation includes every production dimension—from the set/lighting/costume design to the directorial and acting expertise.

Like an audience seeing The Dining Room, the community has witnessed Hampton Theatre Company's familial evolution; we have been fortunate to be a voyeur in its journey toward maturity.

We look forward to watching our favorite actor's development as well, wondering what part he/she might take in the group's next play. Diana Marbury, a long time member of the Company, reiterates the importance of such community theater. "We get to do the plays we really want to do. It's a great joy to work together with the same people over the last several years, including working with my husband, Peter, who designs the sets. This is the way that he and I can come together."

Despite the positive aspects surrounding The Hampton Theatre Company, there are some challenges to confront. According to Ms. Marbury, "Sometimes we have to do things by the seat of our pants; we have little money to pay our actors. Fifteen years ago, it didn't matter as much."

Dining Room writer A.R. Gurney has been compared to Neil Simon, but he is neither as popular nor as prolific. Another comparison would perhaps be more appropriate. All we can offer as a suggestion would be the British "kitchen sink dramas" of the late 1950s and early 1960s, like The Entertainer and Look Back in Anger. (The movies of this period, many based on plays, are now enjoying a retrospective at New York's Film Forum.)

Even so, that comparison really doesn't work. While the kitchen, like the dining room, was an important room in the house for the English working class where salient events took place, that's about it for the similarity.

Speaking of British drama and comparisons, however, Gurney's logistical structure does remind us of Alan Ayckbourn's recent House and Garden where actors portrayed the same role in two different plays being performed simultaneously but in different theatre spaces. Go figure that out. (This critic did see Garden, and it was always a wonder when the actors would make it back in time for a particular line—just as The Dining Room performers made their various costume and physical changes in time.)

Associations aside, The Hampton Theatre Company's The Dining Room was a joy to experience nonetheless—a creative endeavor that reinforces the importance of a special community theater here in our very midst.

He is UNBREAKABLE and Paltrow, as a widow, must BOUNCE. She will rebound with love for the man who is, inadvertently, responsible for her husband's death, Ben Affleck, who cannot bring himself to reveal his accidental complicity. Mr. Willis will find out why he is unbreakable by way of a compelling, meditative and disquieting puzzle penetrating through the dark, smoky mirrors of M. Night Shyamalan, the creator of Bruce's hit, The Sixth Sense. Now, however, he concedes nothing to a little boy, this film is his...he assumes the heavy mantle of depressive grieving in the ominous aura of a dooming apocalyptic, haunting dream state. And, he does it terrifically (which didn't surprise me). I stay a fan through murky-thick and smirky-thin). His understated, yet strong, sad sense of tragedy helps nail down Shyamalan's creative manipulation of seemingly unrelated scenes and events, that are as provocative as tattoo pin pricks that combine eventually, as does the pointillist tattooing, leaving an intricate and fanciful image that is indelible.

UNBREAKABLE and BOUNCE are as different as Night and Day. M. Night Shyamalan's Dark as Night scariness bleeds internally with duplicity and drills on comic books, vulnerability, psychological and physical violence. Writer/director Don Roos' Bouncy, light as Doris Day warmth, teeters on tears and its stars' off-screen intimacy. Nonetheless, both films exude grown-up thoughtfulness while keeping a kid at the core.

Dan's Papers

"They Made The Movie Here" Film Festival 2000

Saturday December 2nd at the Ross School Library at 3 p.m.

19 Goodfriend Drive (off Route 114) East Hampton

Dan's Papers "They Made the Movie Here" FREE Film Festival unbuttons a zippy and laughably tender love story Saturday December 2nd and it's a beauty. Manhattan and Southampton have hardly appeared as rich or as gauchely embrangled than as backdrops for the very schmoozy and funny 1993 For Love Or Money, as pictured through the cockeyed, comic strip viewpoint and viewfinders of director Barry Sonnenfeld's Panavision cameras. The movie looks like it was made for love and money, and lots of it . . . that's not always the case with Hollywood products. Mr. Sonnenfeld, who made a lot of people and banks happy with Men In Black and Get Shorty must know and like Manhattan as well as the Hampton neighborhoods where he is frequently one of the boyz. He's the busy one with the really good cigar and he's made a really good movie by toying with the story of an ambitious young man who must choose between love or money.

The script is openly derivative but slyly clever and has pages of laughs. Though this type of writing can ring a deja vu bell now and then, the quick Michael J. Fox jumps over the lazy dog-eared plot-turns so nimbly you only care about his next leap. He is adept and oh! so winning as the concierge of an elegant New York Hotel, "The Bradbury," realistically portrayed by the Hotel Pierre. As concierge (not a bell hop, merci), he caters to the needs and whims of the guests for what he hopes will be big tips. But, Fox's character, Doug Ireland, doesn't stop there, he anticipates their needs and will even play stupid for big gratuities. He also plays Cupid, but not for profit. Doug is a romantic but doesn't have time for a love life, though a Gift Shop saleslady, Andy Hart, has caught his eye. She is ripely played by Gabrielle Anwar but, Doug is spending every minute working to save every dollar to build his own hotel. He wheels and deals, takes care of pets, leads and guides tourist guests and, for friends, he will provide hourly rooms for assignations . . . anything to get his own dream hotel. For this, he needs a money partner. Christian Hanover, a devil of a money angel shows interest. Anthony Higgins makes him the perfect rotter and lech. Christian may bankroll the project if Doug will give him a suite to meet with his mistress, who turns out to be . . . Andy! And more, Christian expects Doug to "baby-sit" Andy when he besorts himself with other women. Poor Dougie! He falls hard for Andy, then must decide his hotel or her.

For Love Or Money

Doug's caring table is full. He is protecting the job of the aged bellboy, Milton, a tailor-made role for the great Fyvush Finkle. Milton is being persecuted by a teutonic twit of a manager. Dougie is also nurturing the marriage of a nebbish and bends over backward for a needy mob-connected garbage collector. All the while he is being careful of a skulking IRS man who is curious about his tips.

Then there is his drop onto the beach at Southampton, Doug invades a cocktail party on Dune Road in one of those see-through glass houses where the women lob insult stones at each other and the men try to duck the truth about their marital infidelities. Doug did it to get Andy out of harm's way.

For Love Or Money really does have both. It is lovingly romantic and looks like a million dollars. It even has a song performed by Bobby Short, the personification of ritzy ardor. Mr. Sonnenfeld supports all this with loads of schtick, brief comedy tid-bits that appear almost imperceptively and smacking of ethnicity. They kind of slide by with chuckles like commercial breaks on TV, to which they owe a lot, i.e., head-on shots of characters doing facial takes, a parrot commenting, oy,vay! and orthodox Jewish men going after a youth who made fun of their hats.

Barry Sonnenfeld, like Doug, does everything to please and they both wind up making us feel good. Take the music by Bruce Broughton . . . that pleases, too. Sentimental? It's right out of a jar of schmaltz. It burns directly into the heart. But, don't worry, everyone involved with the film has more than enough sparkle and Alka Seltzer fizz to lighten the heaviest heart.

Before the movie we'll show a short video made by a Ross School student. Be there by 3 p.m., and enjoy. Think of For Love Or Money as a pleasant detour off the Information Highway. It will be like parking on lover's lane. You can hold your sweetie's hand and smooch or you can chat me up and down on the making of the movie.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

Maggie Glezer, the author of Artisan Baking Across America, The Breads, The Bakers, The Best Recipes, Artisan, division of Workman Publishing, ($40.) has virtually traveled coast to coast in pursuit of the best breads and the perfect formulas for creating them in the home kitchen.

Captivated by old-fashioned French breads baked in a beautiful old brick oven in Grenoble, France, the author was determined to learn more about the craft. Her intensive research throughout the United States led to the conclusion that the best breads are being baked right here on our own shores.

No doubt this is a challenging bread cookbook. The recipes however are categorized by skill level to help less experienced bakers as well as more accomplished ones.

In her tome, Ms. Glezer takes you into the baking facilities of the best American specialty bakers. Illustrated with lavish photographs, these intimate settings come alive and there you are baking along with the best. Leaving no stone unturned she takes you through the range of flours and yeast types with their reactions and whatever pitfalls, if any that may exist, to the best professional methods and how well they can work at home. She strongly and correctly points out "How important it is to let yourself try and fail - it's only flour, water and yeast."

She further points out that the basic equipment needed for baking is in most cooks kitchens, such as baking sheets, measures, bowls, etc. Although a large capacity food processor or automatic stand mixer is optional, they can really aid in lightening the load.

The amazing medley of breads include the basic white wheat rolls and Glenn Mitchell's kugelhopf, printed below, and many more mouthwatering recipes such as, rustic baguettes, a simple Boston brown bread, Sullivan Street potato pizza, German rye bread, bialys and an almond or rum stollen.

For all of you home bakers Maggie Glezer helps you to savor the crust, crumb and aromas of fresh artisan breads baked right in your own home oven. In consideration of space only the hand method for the recipes is printed below. In the book, alternate stand mixer and food processor methods are given for each recipe.

WHITE WHEAT ROLLS

This recipe, in the beginner section, calls for a sourdough starter, which is optional.

Makes 18 1.8-ounce rolls

2 cups unbleached all-purpose flour

2 cups whole white-wheat flour

1 teaspoon instant yeast

1 1/2 cups plus 2 tablespoons lukewarm water

2 1/4 teaspoons salt

1. Combine both flours and the yeast in a large bowl, then add the water. With a wooden spoon or your hand, mix the dough just until well combined. Cover the dough and let it rest for 10-20 minutes. Alternately, allowing the dough to rest for two hours at this point will add more complexity to the bread.

2. Knead the salt and the starter, if using, into the dough. Turn it out of the bowl and, without adding extra flour, knead it until it is smooth and strong, 5-10 minutes.

3. Place the dough in a covered container at least 3 times its size and cover it tightly with plastic wrap. Let it ferment until it is light, well expanded, and about doubled in bulk, but not to the point of collapsing, about 2 hours. This is a soft dough.

4. Line 2 baking sheets with parchment paper. Lightly flour the top of the dough and your work surface and turn the dough out. Lightly flour the top surface, then flip the dough so that its skin side is up. Cut the dough into 18 equal pieces, each about 2 ounces. Round the pieces into smooth balls. Place them well spaced on the baking sheets and cover them well with plastic wrap. Let them proof until they are very soft and well expanded, 1 1/2 - 2 hours.

5. About 30 minutes before the rolls are fully proofed, arrange the racks on the top and lower third positions and clear away all racks in between. Preheat oven to 450 degrees. Slash or snip the rolls decoratively if desired. Or, if the rolls are too soft, leave them uncut. Bake until the rolls are dark brown all around, 20-25 minutes. Halfway into the bake, rotate the baking sheets and switch their positions on the top and bottom racks. Let cool on a rack.

GLENN MITCHELL'S KUGELHOPF

Kugelhopf, Ms. Glezer writes, "is a simple, understated, but richly flavored yeasted pound cake." It is suggested that the mixed, partially fermented, dough be chilled for 8 to 48 hours. Kugelhopf is a timely cake for the coming holidays. Best to bake it one day before serving.

Makes one 2-pound kugelhopf

1/4 cup plus 2 tablespoons dark raisins
2 tablespoons good-quality dark rum
1 cup milk, any kind
2 teaspoons instant yeast
3 cups unbleached flour
1 1/4 teaspoon salt
1 large egg, plus 1 egg yolk, chilled
6 tablespoons granulated sugar
1/2 cup unsalted butter, softened if mixed by hand

To finish the cake

3 tablespoons unsalted butter
1/4 cup sliced almonds
Powdered sugar for dusting the cake

1. Toss the raisins with the rum in a small bowl and macerate for 6 hours before mixing the dough.

2. Microwave the milk on high power for 4 minutes or heat in a small saucepan on top of the stove until bubbles form around the edges, steam rises and the milk smells cooked. Let it cool to 105 to 115 degrees, about the temperature of a comfortably hot bath. Sprinkle the yeast over the warm milk, stir it in, and let stand for 5 to 10 minutes.

3. For the hand method, add the flour and salt to a large bowl and stir them together briefly to mix. Add the yeast mixture and the egg and yolk. With a wooden spoon or your hand, mix the dough just until well combined. This dough is very stiff and may even seem crumbly. Turn the dough out of the bowl and knead until it is smooth but strong, 5 to 10 minutes. The dough will be gritty from the salt at first, but it will soon dissolve.

4. Add the sugar in two additions and knead the dough again until the sugar is fully incorporated and dissolved — a fairly messy task, a dough scraper will help — and the dough is very smooth. Add the softened butter in two additions, kneading each addition into the dough until it is fully incorporated. (the dough will soften considerably with each addition of sugar and butter). Continue to knead the dough until it is satiny smooth, soft, and glossy. Fold in the macerated raisins and knead just until they are evenly combined.

5. Roll the dough in flour, flatten it, and seal it in a large Ziplock bag. Immediately refrigerate it for 8 to 48 hours. When you are ready to continue, put the dough on a counter and let it finish fermenting in the Ziplock bag for 4-5 hours.

6. Melt the butter and let it cool slightly until it has thickened. Lightly flour your work surface. Remove the dough from the bag, sprinkle it with flour, and press on it to deflate it. Gently round it into a very tight ball, replace it in the Ziplock bag, and let rest until well relaxed, 20-25 minutes.

7. While the dough is relaxing, very heavily coat a 10-cup kugelhopf mold with the butter, using a pastry brush. Be sure to put extra butter on the central cone, where the dough has a tendency to stick, and also leave a shallow pool of butter on the bottom of the mold. Sprinkle the sliced almonds on the pooled butter on the bottom of the mold.

8. Remove the dough from the bag and push your fingers through the center of the dough ball to make a hole. Let the dough rest again for 10 minutes, then enlarge the hole with your hands so that it fits the mold. Dampen your hands with water and pat the smooth top of the dough ring to make it tacky (this will help the almonds stick). Place the dough damp side down in the mold; it should fill it by half. Loosely cover the mold with plastic wrap. Let the dough proof until it is very well expanded and well domed over the top of the mold, about 2 hours.

9. About 20 minutes before the dough is fully proofed, arrange a rack on the oven's bottom shelf and clear away all racks above the one being used. Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

10. Bake the cake until it is well-browned all around, 50-60 minutes, rotating it halfway into the bake. Remove it from the oven, immediately invert it onto a cooling rack, and let it cool completely. The cake is best if stored for a day. Before serving it, sift a snowstorm of powdered sugar over it.

Winter Is For The Birds: Fact And Fiction

Late fall and early winter are the seasons when most people think about feeding our wild birds. "The cold season is rightly seen as the time of year when resident birds most often need extra food for bare survival," writes Helen Witty, co-author of Feed the Birds and East Hampton resident. Food is appreciated by our feathered friends in cold weather but is especially important when snow flies and water sources freeze. While providing food is important, there are quite a few misconceptions about bird feeding and behavior. There are also many other things we can do, with minimal effort, to help birds and other wildlife survive our often-brutal winters.

Food

If you've had feeders up on your property during the fall and suddenly notice, when winter is upon us, that there have been few or no birds visiting them for a couple of days or more, it could be that a hawk, perhaps a Sharp Shinned (they love to prey on birds at feeders), has taken up a temporary residence in your yard. But more likely this abandonment is caused by a break in cold weather, a sunny, mild spell, that encourages birds to visit other locations to find food (and water) that isn't available when the ground is frozen or covered with snow. Birds often return when a storm is approaching. "Our birds seem to positively stock up just before bad weather," comments Helen Witty. I was at the Morton Sanctuary last winter at early dusk with my husband, David, (it was very cold and we were the only ones there) and we had handfuls of hulled sunflower seeds. Chickadees literally took two at a time! The next morning, when we woke up, it had snowed! The birds had sensed the storm and took advantage of our offerings.

A common misconception about bird feeding is that once you start, especially in winter, if you stop birds will die from starvation. Fact: If you stop filling your feeders, birds will move on to find other sources. You needn't feel guilty if you are unable to continue. The only exception to this rule is if there is very severe weather, some birds, especially chickadees, are sometimes in danger at night if they cannot find enough food sources, at feeders or in nature, during the day.

Water

A very important, and often overlooked, source to provide for birds, especially in winter, is water. Providing water will also draw more birds to your yard that otherwise would not show up because they are not seedeaters. Overwintering robins really appreciate this. Because water freezes during harsh winters, often for days at a time, investing in a heated birdbath or a heater for your existing birdbath is well worth the small expense. Wild Bird Crossing in Bridgehampton sells heated birdbaths starting at $49.99. They are well worth the investment!

Winter

that roosting boxes can be just as important for birds that seek shelter from harsh winter blizzards. Roosting boxes differ from nesting boxes primarily by the hole being at the bottom of the box as opposed to the top and there are perches on the inside so that birds can huddle together for warmth. The nesting box has a hole towards the top so that the box will not get too hot in late spring and also so that the nest may be made in the bottom of the box. The roosting box has the hole at the bottom so that warm air doesn't escape (warm air rises, remember) and the birds stay warmer. Birds will use a nest box left up over the winter for roosting when extreme weather approaches. Matt Harnick of Wild Bird Crossing comments, "A great way to give birds shelter in winter is with our convertible bird box: it does double-duty as a nest box in summer as well as a roost box in winter."

Planting

Another way to help wildlife withstand the winter is to plan ahead. In the spring, when you are thinking of planting some new shrubbery and trees, consider varieties that will harbor birds and other animals during the cold winter months. Evergreens such as pine, hemlocks, spruce, yews and firs will provide shelter when the snow flies to many creatures. Hollies, cedars, crabapples and hibiscus (for hummingbirds in summer) will provide food for birds that you won't see at your feeders, such as mockingbirds, cedar waxwings, bluebirds and catbirds.

Holiday Treats

This year, when you're ready to toss out that dry Christmas tree, recycle it by setting it up in your yard instead (just make sure that you didn't use tinsel or any chemical sprays on the tree) and decorate it with popcorn, suet and dried fruits. "We have a wonderful tree decorating kit here at Wild Bird Crossing," says Matt. "It contains everything you need, except suet and peanut butter, to decorate an 8-10 foot tree."

This season, as you celebrate the season next to a warm fire, remember our little friends outside: a little generosity on our part goes a long, long way!

A Touch Of Europe In Southampton Village

Walking into Ileana's charming spa on Job's Lane in Southampton is like being transported back to a more peaceful, elegant time. Classical music and fresh flowers greet you along with Ileana herself, a beautiful, peach-complexioned woman whose very presence is soothing to the soul. I hadn't had a facial for at least a year when I arrived. I had tried many different products on my skin, never being quite sure if I was doing good or harm.

Ileana and her husband defected from Romania almost twenty years ago and she brought with her her conviction that "life is very precious and very short." Too short not to follow your dreams. Ileana's dream was to "create a little wellness center." She has certainly accomplished this goal. She says, "When you come to me and I treat your skin, I look at the whole body, in terms of health and lifestyle, in order to determine treatment. My clients know that they have to work with me: I can only do 50%, they must do the other 50% in order to see real results. The changes can be dramatic, especially with maintenance, but I do not offer or believe in a 'quick fix'. I don't do 'mini facials' of 15 minutes or a half hour because I do not believe that they are beneficial."

No invasive or aggressive treatments are offered here. "Certain products, such as alphahydroxy acid or Retin A, are not right for everyone's skin. I don't believe in gimmicks or what's 'hot'. My treatments, based on European techniques, are very therapeutic and customized. I work with Mother Nature, not against her," says Ileana.

The 'piece de resistance' at Ileana Skin Care is the European facial. Her analytical approach is very scientific. First, questions are asked about lifestyle, medications, hormone imbalances and other personal factors. Next, Ileana examines the skin under a magnifying glass to determine skin type and condition: "skin condition can be improved, but skin type cannot be changed. I stimulate the skin's qualities while correcting and supplying what is missing." In my case, it was determined that I have combination skin, both oily and dry. I also learned that my skin is extremely sensitive (I never knew this! And all of that alphahydroxy acid I had rubbed into it!) and, since my last facial was so long ago, my pores were clogged with toxins. Not a pretty picture.

After the thorough analysis, Ileana applied an aromatic massage oil made with citrus extract. Aside from being incredibly relaxing, the massage improves elasticity and helps blood to reach the skin.

Next came a light exfoliant, enzyme-vegetable mask (the type of mask applied is determined by skin type), followed with a compress of herbal tea. This compress smelled of lavender (heavenly!) and steam was applied for about 10 minutes.

After the mask came the "extraction". This sounds painful, but all you feel is a slight pinch as the pores are cleaned using a small, disposable needle. Ileana explains that, "this is very important, otherwise the skin will not absorb, and benefit from, the other treatments."

After the extraction a pH-balancing lotion, made of aloe vera and extract of South Pacific fruit (reminiscent of the tropics), is applied to help sterilize the skin. Immediately after, a second mask made with Dead Sea Salt is applied to help sterilize further and soothe the skin.

The last mask, a moisturizing mask used to hydrate the skin, is especially helpful in protecting the skin in winter. It is a rich (and extremely soothing) combination of chamomile, gingko extract, extract of fresh tomatoes and essential oils.

The treatment ended with a final massage using Ileana's "magic blue and green balls". This refreshes the skin and sets the treatment.

Ileana likes to quote Hippocrates' famous saying, "food is our medicine". She believes that, "we have to work together with Mother Nature to live a healthy, long life. It is amazing how, with just a little effort, we are able to look and feel so much better."

Next time, Ileana is going to show me what the Egyptians knew thousands of years ago: how to remove unwanted hair with natural bee's wax (no strips!) and the benefits of the "therapeutic body wrap". In the meantime, treat yourself this holiday season to a wonderfully relaxing facial at this gem of a spa. You'll find inspiration as well as beautiful skin down the little alley right next to Topiere.

POLICE BLOTTER

Some gentlemen in Springs were doing their Christmas shopping on the busiest shopping day of the year, the day after Thanksgiving – though they were doing it after hours, and without credit cards. Around 10:45 that night, East Hampton Town Police arrived at Springs General Store in response to a report by a woman living in the apartment above the store of a burglary in progress. Officers found a 1995 Black Dodge sedan parked by the pay phone outside the store and two men standing by the car. Inside the vehicle were two cash registers, a basket full of candles, deli meats, rolling papers – Bambu brand – and two cartons of Newport cigarettes. The officers also found tools in the car, including a cordless drill. One the floor of the car was a wallet containing $391 in cash and a double edged dagger.

When the officers tried to handcuff the suspects they resisted; one of the men knocked an officer in the ground before being taken into custody. A third suspect was spotted lurking in the parking lot and fled, and a fourth was spotted behind the store and also fled. Lacking thieves honor, the apprehended suspects betrayed their comrades, and one of the escaped suspects was later awakened from sleep in his bedroom on Whooping Hollow Road. The fourth suspect remains at large.

* * *

Perhaps a resident of Three Mile Harbor Road was about to settle down for a long winter's nap – outdoors – when he discovered his white hammock, in excellent condition, he told police, gone. The hooks that held the hammock were also gone.

When golfers go berserk – or have nothing better to do. Two unregistered vehicles of an East Hampton man were vandalized by golf clubs; the rear windows and windshield were broken. In the same location another man's vehicle, this one registered, was also violated by golf clubs: the windshield, front turn light, both headlights, the passenger window and the smaller one next to it were smashed.

* * *

The accomplice of the man who pretended to be a Rockefeller this summer has been arrested and arraigned in Suffolk County Court. Dante J. Daniello posed as Christopher Rocancourt's aide de camp this past summer, as Rocancourt bilked a number of gullible individuals out of more than $200,000. Daniello and Rocancourt (who is still at large) had been charged with six felonies each and two misdemeanor theft of services – they owed $19,540 in hotel and room services bills. One wonders if they were at least good tippers.

Dan's LETTERS

YOU CAN GO HOME AGAIN

Dear Dan,

Hats off to a lovely Thanksgiving Day lunch at Villa Paul, Montauk highway. Crossroads at Hampton Bays.

The Balducci family – produce people from the 1920s gathered. Our family, daughters Rose from Colorado – Laura from Hampton Bays and Debbie and families.

All met Grandma and Grandpa there for lunch. There is charm from old with a wonderful warm cozy fireplace, pumpkins all over, wooden floors, a wonderful back porch with lacy curtains.

Simply lovely. You feel like you went home again – You can do that!

LET'S CLEAN UP THIS MESS

Dear Dan,

In the aftermath of this chaotic presidential election, two new classes of people have arisen. The people who have taken to the streets carrying place cards and protesting everything about voting procedures and the results and this strange new breed of experts known as election lawyers.

These people carrying around signs must have nothing better to do with their lives. Do they have jobs, do they have families, do they go to school, do they have any other responsibilities that you and I have? What would they be doing if this counting fiasco had not taken place? Where were they after the election for the last 20 years? I think they are related to the people who are throwing rocks at each other in Israel. What will they do if peace ever comes?

The Election lawyer experts are an interesting breed. I never knew they existed. How do they make a living? Who are their clients? Like the people carrying signs, where would they be if the networks and cable channels didn't screw up this election with their hysterical calls on the vote counts? I have been watching the networks and cable channels for the past week since the election. They all say the same thing – they really don't know – it's up to the state courts and judges. So why are they wasting everyone's time? What do they do between elections? I repeat – Who are they?

This is the question on everyone's mind these days following the confusion in Florida and possibly other states. I suggest that before we change a constitution that has served us well, we look at some other changes that would prevent this type of scenario in the future.

The suggestions that follow are not all that complicated. They are as follows.

Standardize the ballot in all the states. That infamous confusing ballot in Palm Beach county illustrates what can happen if this responsibility is left to local officials who really don't know what's going on.

Count the results by computer. Paper ballots should not be used.

Standardize the counting of absentee ballots.

Members of the Electoral College must abide by the popular vote in their respective states and vote accordingly. Allowing them to vote otherwise makes a mockery of the process.

Ban the networks and cable channels from reporting any results until 24 hours after the polls close. Give people a chance to vote intelligently and not be bombarded with stupid exit polls, hysterical projections two seconds after the pool close and all the hype that goes on. The networks and cable channels will make the same profits with or without these projections.

We like to talk about Campaign Finance reform. How about Election and Election Results Reporting Reform. How about the millions and millions of dollars spent in these campaigns and we can't count up who won. Look at the choice these millions of dollars gave us. We can reform this archaic system. Let's put our energy, brains and all that money to work and solve these problems. We've got four years starting NOW.

Mel Walter
Westhampton Beach

Hamptons International Film Festival 2000

This year's Film Festival was, once again, a smashing success. Over 20,000 filmgoers, industry professionals and filmmakers attended over the five days of films and special events offered. In total, almost $100,000 in cash and $180,000 of goods and services were awarded. The Festival, now in its eighth year, is considered a premier regional event.

This year, fifty-four programs were presented, fewer than last year. "I would not like to see the Hamptons Festival [as compared to New York's Film Festival, which also takes place in the fall] become huge," said Lynda Hansen, co-director of programming. "Our charm is location, beauty, and intimacy."

The Festival is becoming big in other ways, however. "We're branching out as a world festival," said the event's executive director, Denise Kasell. "When you get all the players, the major distributors like New Line, Lions Gate and Sony Picture Classics, you have a platform that's international, where filmmakers get noticed."

The winner of the Feature Film category, Falling Like This, was directed by Dani Minnick and should go on to garner acclaim as a teen classic. Shot in the cinema verite style on digital video, the film boasts one of most memorable casts of young actors in a long time.

In terms of East Hampton connections, Nigel Noble, an Academy Award-winner and resident (interviewed for Dan's Papers by contributing writer Joan Zandell), presented his documentary film, The Charcoal People, a film about the migrant workers of Brazil's rain forest. Also represented was longtime East Hampton resident, artist Jackson Pollock, in Ed Harris' film Pollock, based on the book Jackson Pollock: An American Saga.

An ambitious new category involved the incorporation of a ten-year partnership with the Nobel Laureates Foundation and its $25,000 prize, awarded by an international jury. The prize, "enables us to concentrate on troubled areas, bringing in those filmmakers who come from regions of conflict and who have made art, nonetheless," said Ms. Kasell.

Speaking of conflict, a new program debuted this year entitled "Films of Conflict and Resolution," eerily timely considering the degenerating situation in the Middle East. Israeli director Ilan Yagoda's Rain 1949 and Talya Ezrachi's short film, The Jahalin, focused attention on the crisis by telling personal stories. Director Yagoda grew up on a kibbutz founded by refugees of the Holocaust in Palestine and returned there to document its history for his film.

Clearly not wanting to take unnecessary advantage of what is a difficult international crisis, Festival co-director of programming Linda Blakaby somberly summed up the coincidental occurrences: "I wish [the series "Films of Conflict and Resolution"] weren't as timely as it is."
